
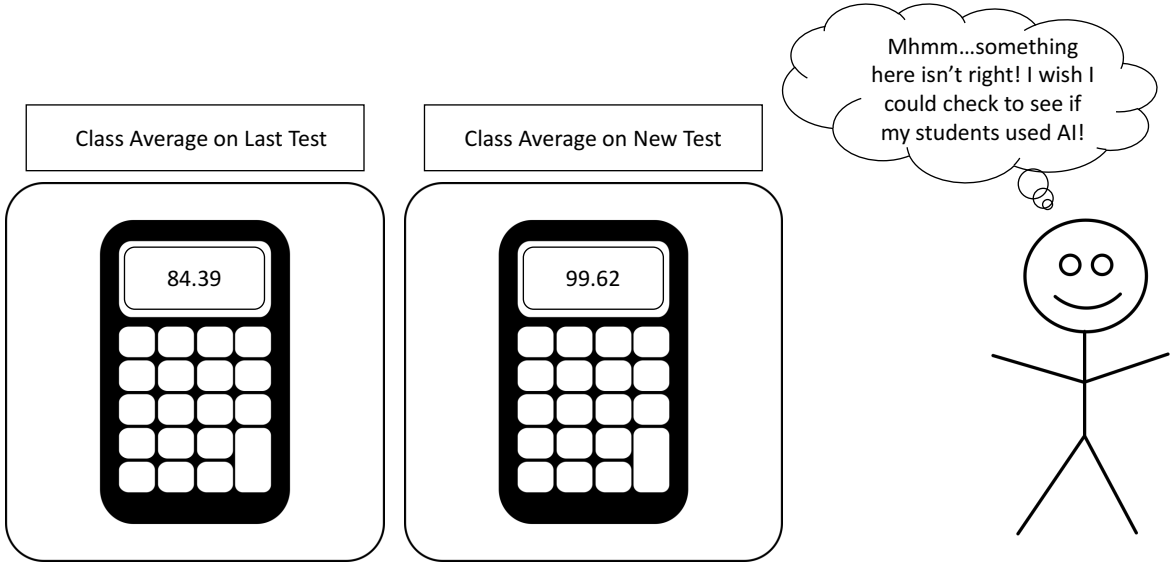
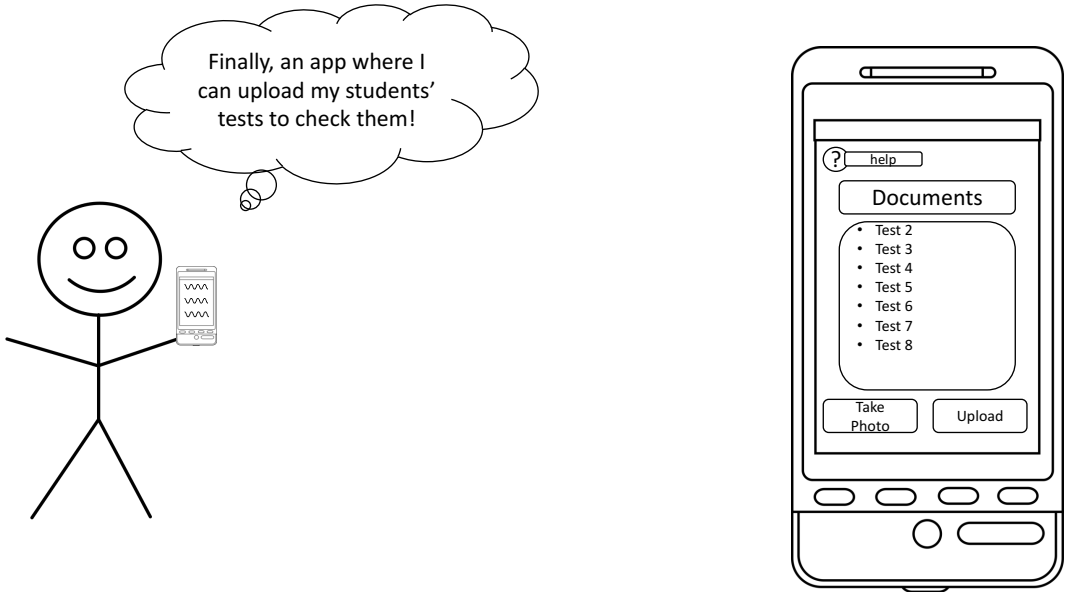
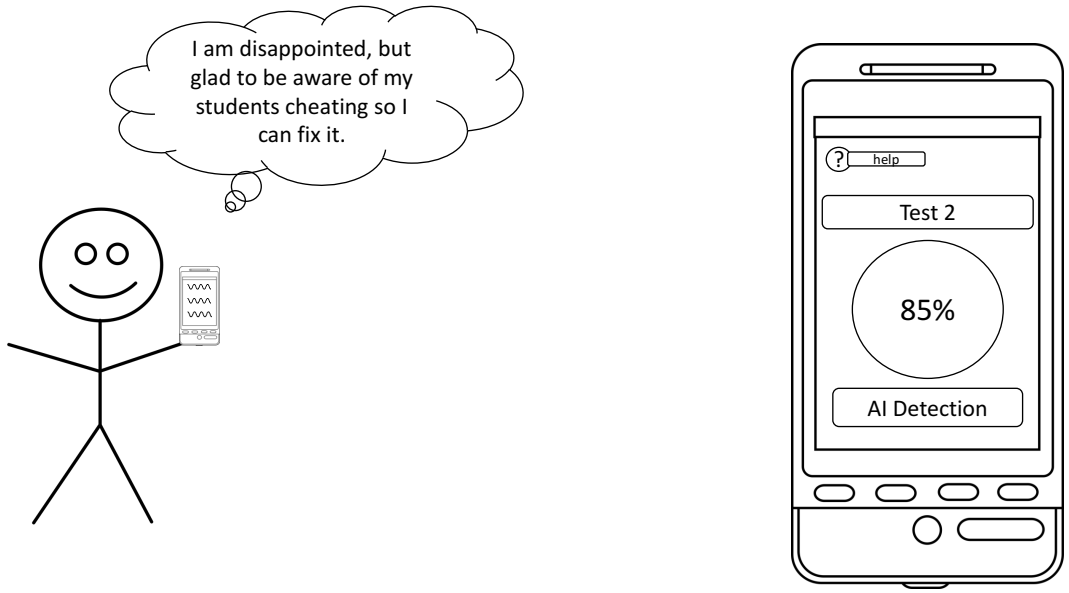
The students are going home to take their tests and find themselves using AI to get answers.



The test scores come in, and Jayne Greek clearly realizes that the students must have cheated. After googling and noticing how popular AI is getting, she began to look for a solution to find out the truth.



Jayne ran across an app where an individual can take a photo or upload any document, no matter the size, to see if they have been created by AI.



The app will also give a percentage of AI detection in the assignments that were uploaded. This makes it where Jayne can change her curriculum to fix this error. She can make all the tests in person now to ensure that there is no cheating.

J. Jonah Jameson is a harsh editor-in-chief who works at the Daily Bugle, and he only cares about a couple things: Money, Spider-Man, and the best of the best stories. Not many people like him due to his aggressive attitude, his obsession with Spider-Man, and want for money.

J. Jonah Jameson found his stride in profit by exploiting Spider-Man. He made sure that his papers were filled with nothing but showing Spider-Man as a villain instead of as a hero. Many people didn’t believe this but it didn’t matter to him since he was making massive profit.

His newspapers gained massive popularity over the people which inspires Jameson to continue posting newspapers where Spider-Man is a villain.

Many of his co-workers thought that Jameson was insane to think Spider-Man is a hero, since he saved many lives, but Jameson didn’t care. He was making money, gaining popularity, and seemed like he’s becoming obsessed with Spider-Man

Jameson became so obsessed that Spider-Man is a villain, to the point he sees the hero’s action that is for the good as a negative by all means.

When other newspapers wrote about Spider-Man’s heroic actions, Jameson’s papers were gaining lots of backlash and thought that Spider-Man ruined his career and life. (In reality nothing major happened but Jameson was losing his mind over Spider-Man)
